

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Dawson and Brooks at Santa Barbara, California. They can beat Northern Ohio in the winter, but fall behind in May. L. J.

The Condor. Vol. XV, January-February, 1913, No. 1.

It is rarely that we are treated to such a feast of Shore Birds as we find in the first article by W. Leon Dawson, "A Glimpse of Surf-birds." The five reproductions of photographs approach perfection both from the standpoint of the photographer and the engraver. "Concealing and Revealing Coloration of Animals," by Junius Henderson, adds valuable points to this current controversy. In "Swallows and Bedbugs" Edward R. Warren shows that the swallows are not guilty of harboring the species which harrasses humans, but that it does harbor an allied species. Two articles follow relating to local distribution. In the final article Joseph Grinnell discusses at length "The Outlook for Conserving the Band-tailed Pigeon as a Game Bird of California." Interesting field notes close the number to the editorial page. L. J.